Case Analysis

Digitex supports a Historical Museum with it's dynamic exhibit programs....

Client

A leading Alberta Historical Museum that showcases a wide range of extraordinary art and artifacts from around the world. It presents a museum, art gallery, library and archives all under one roof.

Project Scope

In the past it has been a concern that the management of in house technology can sometimes be time consuming and eat up a large amount of budget funds. The Museum required the support of an organization that could understand the unique requirments of a working archival facility and implement workflows to streamline and create efficiencies.

"This was a large undertaking and Digitex made it a fun experience. They are very friendly, easy people to work with."

Digitex Value

Digitex has been able to provide the Museum with centralized management of existing and new in house technology that support the everyday administration workflow and educational initiatives of the museum. Digitex has made it easier to manage in house technology and support management information systems as they move towards customizing a solution that is current and relative to everyday operations. Digitex has been able to provide solutions that take care of administration, invoicing, and even promotional items that capture the history and beauty of the museum. By installing upgraded equipment, the Museum has future-proofed it's workflows and systems. In addition, Digitex has provided a level of service and expertise unparalleled by previous vendors. To represent the historical relevance and integrity of western Canadian history, the Museum has introduced the use of colour, which has been excellent for exhibits and educational programs. Archival and reporting purposes needed attention and Digitex has been able to provide a solution that makes the management of information easily accessible for research and digital file storing moving forward using a digital workflow.
